

School was hard. It's difficult for me to understand when people talk too fast, if there are too many instructions or distractions. Learning new things took a long time. Later, I was home schooled. History and reading were, and still are, my favorites. Acting is also a passion.

What shocked me later in life is to find out the blatant discrimination against Trisomy 18 & Trisomy 13 children by the medical community. Many children are refused medical treatment. I decided to take action.
